Cascade Affordable Housing Names Steve Dymoke as New Vice President

Cascade Affordable Housing LLC has named Steve Dymoke as its vice president of affordable housing, announced Stan Harrelson, Cascade's president and CEO. Dymoke will be responsible for new acquisitions and asset management of affordable multifamily properties throughout the United States.

Prior to joining Cascade, Dymoke was the director of development with Catapult Community Developers. He helped owners of affordable housing properties acquire new business throughout the Northwest. He also represented the owners in the development of an urban townhome project in the Theater District of downtown Tacoma.

Dymoke joined Cascade in October 2004 and will be based in Cascade's headquarters in Seattle, Wash. Dymoke has more than sixteen years of real estate experience in the areas of asset management, finance, acquisitions and development.

Dymoke earned a bachelor's degree from University of St. Thomas in St. Paul, Minn., and a Master of Science degree from the University of Wisconsin in Madison, Wisc.

Cascade Affordable Housing acquires and invests in general and limited partnership interests of tax credit and other affordable properties throughout the U.S.

With expertise in Low Income Housing Tax Credits, HUD programs and a variety of financing structures, Cascade quickly evaluates investment opportunities and provides superior investment returns to its investors and clients.
